----Original Message----

From: Bruce, Gretchen [mailto:gretchenb@fremontpublic.org]

Sent: Monday, July 03, 2000 8:27 PM

To: 'public.info@ots.treas.gov'

Subject: Encourage Action - Regulate Sub Prime Lending

Manager, Dissemination Branch Information Management and Services Division Office of Thrift Supervision 1700 G Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20552

Attn: Docket No. 2000-34

Dear Office of Thrift Supervision:

On behalf of the Fremont Public Association I would respectfully like to comment on OTS' Responsible Alternative Mortgage Lending rulemaking, Docket No. 2000-34.

The FPA provides mortgage default counseling to over 300 homeowners each year. Predatory lending practices have increased dramatically in recent years. Not only do they harm low-income and minority homeowners, but they also impair the safety and soundness of institutions engaging in these practices since such practices often lead to borrower default. Since traditional federal thrifts are beginning to be active players in the subprime market, now is the appropriate time for OTS to set the appropriate standards of conduct through regulation. In addition, many finance companies engaged in subprime lending have applied to OTS to obtain thrift charters.

An appropriate federal regulation on subprime home loans would be based on three principles.

1 - Eliminate Pre Payment Penalties First, no subprime home loan (defined as loans having an interest rate greater than conventional loans) should contain a prepayment penalty.
Prepayment penalties trap borrowers in high-rate loans, which too often leads to foreclosure. Borrowers in predominantly African American neighborhoods are five times more likely to be subject to a prepayment penalty than borrowers in white neighborhoods. The marketplace will help enforce fair lending principles and police steering if borrowers can get out of bad loans as soon as they realize they are harmed, but prepayment penalties prevent this from happening. Finally, borrower choice cannot explain the prevalence of prepayment penalties in subprime loans since only 2% of borrowers accept prepayment penalties in the competitive conventional market, while, according to Duff and Phelps, 80% of subprime loans charge them.

- 2 Eliminate Punitive Loan Charges Second, no home loan should contain up-front, lump-sum credit insurance premiums or debt cancellation/suspension agreements that are financed into the loan. Finally, for subprime loans that exceed HOEPA thresholds, OTS should implement additional protections, such as prohibiting balloon payments, the financing of fees into the loan amount, mandatory arbitration and requiring homeownership counseling before closing. In addition, OTS should require thrifts, their affiliates, and subsidiaries to openly and fairly evaluate potential borrowers to the lowest-cost products offered by their related entities. Finally, thrifts should receive unfavorable CRA consideration for the origination, purchase or servicing of loans with harmful characteristics, such as subprime loans with prepayment penalties, financed credit insurance or debt cancellation/suspension agreements, and fees greater than 3% of the loan amount as defined by HOEPA.
- Repeal the Parity Act OTS should revise its Alternative Mortgage Transaction Parity Act (the "Parity Act") regulation (12 CFR 560.220.) to remove prepayment penalties and late fees from the list of applicable regulations. This revision would enable states to better regulate non-depository state housing creditors (primarily finance companies). Under current regulation, these state housing creditors are able to preempt state law restrictions on prepayment penalties and late fees by structuring loans as alternative mortgages (either adjustable rate mortgages or mortgages with balloon payments). These lenders are thus able to take advantage of federal preemption without any corresponding obligation to submit to agency regulation.

OTS' role under the Parity Act is to identify which thrift regulations apply specifically to mortgage loans with alternative structures. Since the provisions relating to prepayment penalties and late fees apply to all mortgage loans generally, these provisions should be removed from the list of regulations applicable to state housing creditors. Certainly, time has demonstrated that allowing unregulated, non-depository institutions to piggyback on federal thrift preemption has inadvertently facilitated predatory lending practices.

I encourage the OTS to recommend to Congress that it repeal the Parity Act. In the midst of the high interest rate environment of the early 1980's, the Parity Act was passed to enable state-chartered lenders to offer ARMs and avoid asset-liability mismatches. The mortgage lending market, however, has changed dramatically over the last twenty years. Alternative mortgages are commonly accepted in the marketplace, and lenders have many more options available to manage asset-liability problems associated with mortgage lending. Therefore, the Parity Act is no longer necessary to ensure the adequate supply of mortgage credit to American homebuyers. Not only is the Parity Act no longer necessary, it is now harmful to state efforts to restrict deceptive terms that meet the Parity Act's definition of "alternative" mortgages, such as balloon payments, on high cost loans.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Gretchen Bruce, Housing Counselor Program Manager Fremont Public Association